

This country is the last bastion against state repression

Retrieved Tuesday 25th of April 2017 08:23:43 PM

My name is Markus Miller and my specialty are protected financial assets abroad. In this activity I exchange with many financial and protection experts, including Thomas Schwarzer. And again and again the question arises: "Where is my money still safe today? I protect it from the EU bureaucrats? "

For years, I have been "preaching" that investors should build a safe footing outside the European banking community in order to protect effectively. And that is why I am very glad that with my colleague Thomas Schwarzer I have found a competent sparring partner in my protection in order to jointly undertake a kind of reconnaissance work on capital protection.

I would like to present to you today a country that will soon be considered a kind of "island of the blissful".

While in the rest of Europe a wild storm of redistribution and the threat of state sprawl rages, you simply pull up the drawbridge and create an oasis ...

This country is one of the smallest states in Europe. Nevertheless, it has been one of the most attractive and successful economic states on the continent since the early 1950s.

This country is the only one that still plays with open cards in Europe. While you can not rely on politicians' promises, especially in this country here. If a bank is in a state of misery (it is not even possible to go out of the way), then there are no statutory penalties.

Scandals like in Germany with the Hypo Real Estate are unthinkable in this country. One reason is the high equity ratios. But there are also, for example the strict concentration on the private customer business. There is no such thing as an investment business with private banks in that state at all!

Even loans make up only a very small part of the business of these banks. Therefore, the risk that a larger system-relevant bank might fail due to risky speculation is very low.

Of course, the country is not a member of the EU. This is one of the biggest advantages for me because, as an investor in one of these countries, you are not exposed to the liability risks of the European Stability Mechanism (ESM).

Nevertheless, this country benefits from the Advantages, Which the EU also offers: the banks and insurance companies have access to the European single market. And this is the jumping point:

As a German investor, you can, for example, take out life insurance, which is 100% recognized by the German state. AND: Life insurance in this country are much more flexible than those from Germany.

The government of Liechtenstein is very much attached to a solid state budget. Even before Switzerland, for example, a debt brake and the state pensions were radically rehabilitated.

What hardly an investor knows: Liechtenstein banks have direct access to the Swiss National Bank. This means that the banks from equated with Swiss institutions on this point.

Liechtenstein is often thrown together with some exotic tax havens and banana republics in the Caribbean, Central America or Asia.

Some investors feared, as once Klaus Zumwinkel from the post office in the morning at 5 o'clock by a rollcommando the tax drudger overrun. Just because they have an account in Liechtenstein.

But this does not correspond to the facts at all. On the one hand, Liechtenstein has committed itself to transparency and transparency, on the other hand, the financial is not even the most important industry. At 37%, the domestic industry still stands. Only then do the banks follow.

With a life insurance from Liechtenstein, you are in no way going to illegality.

They protect your assets only from the access of German and European bureaucrats. And that is your right!

The advantage of a Liechtenstein life insurance is that you have exactly the same life insurance as you do in Germany. In any case,

In a fund there are also different securities or even securities categories. This is exactly what you do in your life insurance: you can have securities within the insurance without having to disclose this externally. For example, against the German tax office.

As long as you continue to save or maintain insurance, you can buy or sell almost all current securities for insurance. Just like in a normal deposit.

Of course I can not give you all the advantages in this short email. Therefore, I have compiled a special report, which you can now download completely free of charge by PDF.
